Is Secom more robust than turn-level retrieval?

Interestingly, there is a significant performance disparity in turn-Level and session-Level methods when using different retrieval models. In contrast, SeCom enjoys greater robustness in terms of the deployed retrieval system. The figure below presents the pairwise comparison result by instructing GPT-4 to determine the superior response.

Does Secom perform better on long-term conversation benchmarks locomo and long-Mt-bench+?

Experimental results show that SeCom exhibits a significant performance advantage over baselines on long-term conversation benchmarks LOCOMO and Long-MT-Bench+. Additionally, the proposed conversation segmentation method demonstrates superior performance on dialogue segmentation datasets such as DialSeg711, TIAGE, and SuperDialSeg.

Why does Secom achieve a higher win rate compared to baseline methods?

SeCom achieves a higher win rate compared to all baseline methods. We attribute this to the fact that topical segments in SeCom can strike a balance between including more relevant, coherent information while excluding irrelevant content, thus leading to more robust and superior retrieval performance.
