

Yan Mengdi Drilling Rig Operator

Who manages the rigs?

Energy Drilling manages the tender-assist rigs, while the others manage the drillships and semisubs. As of the end of 2021, the ten largest offshore rig contractors managed 44% of the global rig fleet of 723 jackups, semisubs, and drillships. This includes units under construction but not yet delivered.

Will Middle East rig contractors continue adding jackups in 2022?

Given the appetite for jackups in the Middle East, rig contractors in this region are expected to continue adding to their fleets. Middle East contractor ADES is likely to make an appearance on the top ten list for 2022 after it went on a buying spree that started in the second half of 2021 and has yet to show signs of slowing down.

Will ADES be a top ten rig contractor in 2022?

Middle East contractor ADES is likely to make an appearance on the top ten list for 2022 after it went on a buying spree that started in the second half of 2021 and has yet to show signs of slowing down. This year has already started out strong for rig contractors with demand and dayrates rising around the world.

Will global offshore rig demand rise in 2022?

Global offshore rig demand is set to finish 2022 higher than it ended 2021. Further consolidation among rig contractors is also anticipated this year, which should result in a shake-up among the top ten list for 2022. Cinnamon Edralin is Head of Rigs Research, Esgian.

How many rigs are under construction?

In terms of new construction, the top ten did not make much of a dent in their holdings, with the under-construction count dropping from 16 to 13. However, globally, the number of rigs under construction dropped from 66 to 58.

What happened to rig sales in 2021?

Rig sales picked up a bit last year. According to Esgian's Rig Analytics database, 62 rig sales were completed in 2021, up from 58 the prior year. Sales within the drilling market picked up by seven, while sales for recycling dropped by one and sales for conversion into non-drilling units dropped by two.
